T-Mobile teaches girls about careers, education

REDLANDS – T-Mobile employees spent some time at the Boys & Girls Club talking with female members about education and careers on Nov. 8.

Their workshop was themed “SMART Girls in Technology” and was held at the Club’s Hansberger Clubhouse in Redlands for middle school and high school members. SMART Girls is a Boys & Girls Club program that builds wellness and self-esteem in girls through activities, mentoring and field trips.

“It was with great pleasure that several leaders from T-Mobile stores in the Inland Empire could come together with the SMART Girls program at the Boys & Girls Club in Redlands to offer mentorship, industry expertise, and a community partnership that we continue to nurture into 2020,” said Jill Hamilton, T-Mobile retail district manager, Inland Empire East. “We adore the kids and had an incredible time working on this initiative.”

T-Mobile employees shared statistics on careers and salaries for women, had participants do an exercise on communication, and talked about education, goal setting and planning for the future.

T-Mobile has a tuition assistance program for employees.

Boys & Girls Club offers programs after school and during school breaks year round to youth ages 5 to 18. All programs fall under academic success, good character and citizenship, and healthy lifestyles. There are many ways to support the youth at the Club, including donations to support programs, volunteer time, and donations of items like school supplies.
